

VOTE FOR THE WATER BONDS

An Address by the Mayor and City Council Stating Why It Is Necessary to Vote for Bonds on September 6th, 1910. Unless the Bonds Are Voted the City Must Increase the Taxes or Abandon the Water Extension and Improvements. Shall the City Go Forward or Backward.

TO THE TAXPAYERS OF OGDEN CITY.
The City of Ogden will hold a special election on Tuesday, September 6th, 1910, for the purpose of authorizing the issuing of $100,000 in bonds, the same to be used to build an additional conduit from Cold Water Canyon to the new reservoir, also to build a new conduit leading from the new reservoir to the distributive system, and also to build a small dam for the storage of water in Cold Water Canyon.

The present conduit, running down Ogden Canyon, was built 20 years ago and is too small for present needs. If water extensions are to be made, more water must be secured at once.

The following water main extensions are demanded by the people.

STATEMENT OF PETITIONS.
For extensions of water mains: giving the location, and the name of the applicant; amounting to between five and six miles of 6-inch mains.

32nd Street, between Wall and Pingree, by C. A. Stephens and others.
21st Street, Harrison to Jackson, by Pithian Fiechtz and others.
Pacific Ave., North from 28th Street, by Alex. Baxter and others.
32nd Street, bet. Grant and Wash., by D. C. Lawson and others.
34th Street, bet. Wash. and Adams, by S. S. Smith and others.
24th Street, from Pierce to Tyler, by Jno. S. Corlew and others.
Sheridan Ave., south of 26th St., by Chas. Ulver and others.
Adams Ave., from 29th to 33rd Sts., by F. M. Browning and others.

30th St., between Wash. and Grant, by Geo. A. Holt and others.
New Addition to City Cemetery, by Geo. Hiss and others.
West Ogden, by Wasatch Orchard Co., and others.
Madison Ave., south of 28th St., by Fred M. Nye and others.
Ogden Ave., bet. 25th and 36th Sts., by J. T. Ashby and others.
Third St., east of Wash. Ave., by Board of Education and others.
Fourth St., from Wash. to Adams, by W. B. Wedell and others.
Adams Ave., bet. 24th and 35th Sts., by H. Can Brack and others.
Jefferson bet. 35th and 36th, by J. W. F. Volker and others.

In addition to these petitions and requests for extensions of water mains, we have had numerous verbal requests from different districts for extensions, and also for the replacing of the 2-inch mains by larger ones because the smaller mains do not, at the present time, give the water consumers a sufficient supply with so many consumers on the small mains. This difficulty, however, cannot be overcome, even with larger mains, unless we increase the supply of water for the entire distributive system, as we are, at the present time, beyond our capacity and cannot give an adequate supply to the present water takers; consequently, it would be useless to make any further extensions without the additional supply of water to be obtained by building a new conduit from Cold Water Canyon to our new reservoir and continuing from the new reservoir down 22nd, or 23rd, street to Quincy Avenue, which will materially increase the water supply through the distributive system, and give all plenty of water.

WATERWORKS WILL PAY THE BONDS.
While the city is asking the taxpayers to issue the bonds, the mayor and city council promise the people that the bonds can and will be paid from the profits of the waterworks system in four annual installments of $25,000 each year. We propose to issue the bonds, and no matter who are the successors of the present mayor and city council, they will be compelled to pay the bonds at the rate of $25,000 each year. The bonds will be for $1,000 each and 25 will be made payable in one year, 25 in two years, 25 in three years and 25 in four years. The water department will even pay the interest on the bonds.

Some people have asked why the city does not build the new conduit and run in debt for it by borrowing the money from the banks, if we can pay back one-fourth each year. That is just the trouble. The law says the city must not run in debt beyond its taxes for any year, except by permission of the taxpayers granted at a special election. The banks will take the debt if it is authorized by the taxpayers.

If the taxpayers of Ogden refuse to authorize us to issue the bonds, there is nothing left for the city to do, except to abandon all contemplated extensions of the water mains and improvements. Under the law, the city council must furnish water for the people and it takes money to do that. Either the taxes will be increased or the taxpayers must grant us permission to run in debt for four years by issuing bonds. It will not cost the taxpayers one cent to issue bonds, but it will increase the city taxes for two years over 50 per cent, if the money is raised by taxes. Vote "Yes" with no increase in taxes; Vote "No" and your taxes will be increased, or the improvements will not be made.

We submit this matter to the taxpayers of Ogden for their earnest consideration.
Taxes, taxpayer, what plenty of water for Ogden city means. Think of your city's future. Grant our request and we promise to drink your water supply by starting the work this fall and making all the improvements, and also water extensions above called for, having all ready before the opening of next summer.

There will be no carriages or automobiles to take you to the polls. The city has no money to spend for that purpose. Each taxpayer must furnish his own conveyance. This question is up to the taxpayers. Let them decide without interference from anybody.

Respectfully submitted to the taxpayers of Ogden.

HE SLEPT UNDER A GARDEN SPRAY

Officer Positive the Fellow Was Drunk, But the Sleeper Was Only Fatigued—Strange Case in Police Court—Water Has Soothing Effect on Stranger.

"I can't tell whether this man was drunk or crazy," said Judge Murphy this morning, after hearing the testimony in the case of the City against Carl Smith. "He had better stand aside until a further investigation can be made as to what is really the matter with the man. It seems strange to me that he would sleep under the play of water from a garden hose, entirely oblivious to his environment."

Carl Smith pleaded not guilty to the charge of being "unlawfully drunk" August 15, and the court proceeded to hear testimony in the case. Officer Kellher being sworn to give evidence in the interests of the city.

Officer Kellher stated that on the night of August 15 he found Smith on the Union Depot lawn, fast asleep, under the garden hose that was distributing water in different directions. He said that the fellow was apparently dead to the world, as he paid no attention to the free shower bath he was receiving. After arousing the man, he concluded that the fellow was drunk, for he showed no signs of being sick and it would be quite impossible for him to sleep under the spray of water unless he were under the influence of liquor.

The officer said he had seen a good many drunken men and thought he knew one when he saw him, and that it was his opinion that Smith was drunk.

Smith stated on the witness stand that he was not drunk, and that he had never indulged in intoxicating drinks in his life. He also stated that he was from Kansas City, arriving here the afternoon of August 15, looking for work in his life of watching making. He was very tired and he laid down upon the lawn at the depot to rest. He said the hose was turned on him after he fell asleep and that he was so fatigued that the gentle fall of water did not awaken him. He said it was rather warm that night, and that the spray of water must have served as a soothing bath. At any rate, Morphens held him until the thump of the policeman's stick upon his shoes aroused him.

It is more than likely that Smith will be released from custody. He stated after the adjournment of the case in the presence of the judge, that he is not a drinking man and that he actually slept soundly and naturally under the spray of the lawn hose.

ARCH BROWNING IS AN EXPERT DRIVER

Had a Trying Experience in Wyoming With Washouts, Wind and Sand, But Brought His Cadillac of 1911 Model Through Without a Mishap—Long Journey a Complete Success.

With their cyclometer reading "1,981 miles," Archie Browning of the Browning garage, and Harry Brack of Salt Lake City arrived in Ogden late yesterday afternoon in a Cadillac 30 horsepower touring car, which they had driven to this city from the factory in Detroit, Mich. The young men left the City of Straits Monday, August 8, making the entire trip without any mishaps to the automobile. Their route was by way of Chicago, Omaha and Cheyenne.

Browning by the wind and sun and battered with mud and dust, the two motorists looked like American Indians just off the warpath when they pulled into the Grant Avenue garage and leaped from the car. They were in good spirits, however, and stated that they had enjoyed the long trip hugely and were feeling fine, despite their rather haggard appearance.

"We really had a good time overland with the car," said Browning this morning, in telling the story of the journey. "We only touched the wrench once on the whole trip, and that was to tighten the foot brake, and we had some awful stiff roads to get over at that. We used no water in the radiator and had no trouble with the car. Throughout the trip we averaged fourteen miles to the gallon of gasoline and altogether used only eight quarts of lubricating oil. The longest trip for one day was from Marshalltown, Ia. to Columbus, Neb., a distance of 321 miles. We averaged about 250 miles a day during the entire trip."

"The roads through the central states were very good, but we were caught in a number of rain storms. When we got to Wyoming we struck bad roads—roads that were in places made almost impassable by washouts and sand. The road between Rawlins and Rock Springs, Wyo., is the worst stretch between New York and San Francisco. It is about fifty miles of sand and washouts and one can't tell whether he is on a road or not. This is one of the worst features of the trip through Wyoming—one is so apt to get lost from the trail. Near Fort Steele we lost the road and wandered among the sagebrush and sand for several hours. There were all kinds of washouts around us; in fact, we seemed to be in a regular labyrinth of ditches and it seems only a matter of good luck that we ever did get back on the trail again."

"Another bad feature of Wyoming travel is the perpetual wind—that's what's the matter with my face. Its no pleasant thing to face the sanded winds of Wyoming for days at a time. Leave out Wyoming and the trip was altogether pleasant. We had courteous treatment all along the route from everybody with whom we came in contact and no accidents whatever. Just the one adventure of being lost, that was all of an exciting nature that there was in the trip."

In which the trip was made in 1911 model of the Cadillac automobile. The young men made the trip to Detroit by rail and decided to bring the car to Ogden overland just for the novelty of the trip and to try out the staying qualities of the new car. In every manner the trip appears to have been satisfactory.

CHEROKEE INDIANS HELD

Frank Bell and Bel Rio, the half-breed Cherokee Indians charged with robbery, waived the right to a preliminary hearing before Judge Murphy this morning and their bonds were fixed at $500 each.

The defendants are alleged to have held up, at the point of ugly revolvers, N. S. Lofgren and a negro, William Clark, July 23, and robbed them of $50, all but 50 cents of which was taken from Mr. Lofgren. The holdups were at different places in the city, and at different times during the night. Lofgren and Clark not being together.

Two other holdups were reported that night, and the parties from whom money was taken were reasonably certain that the Indians turned the trick, but the identification was not strong enough to warrant the filing of complaints. The defendants came from Oklahoma, having been in Ogden only a few days before the robberies were committed.

Not being able to furnish the required bonds, the men will be held in the county jail pending the filing of the information charging them with the offense and their trial in the district court.

"THE LOTTERY MAN"

Deseret News, Aug. 16: The new season in the new regime opened at the Colonial this week. While it was a sort of preliminary to the main event, it gave a pleasant foretaste of what the patrons of the house may expect under the new order of things. The new scale of prices, $1.50, was in vogue for the first time, and while all the seats were not filled, the number of guests thus far have been above the average, and with the charming impression the first offering scored, there is little doubt that the two remaining performances, this afternoon and evening, will build up a handsome total.

The attraction is "The Lottery Man," a comedy by Mrs. Young, who wrote "Brown of Harvard," and it is presented in Salt Lake by a strong New York company, with William Scott, and Vivian Ogden in the role of the lottery man, and the well remembered Miss Hazy of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." The part of Lizzie in the present play is an exact copy of Hazy, and if Miss Ogden has more of it than she did last night, she will have satisfied the audience as thoroughly as she did the audience. While the part verges on the grotesque at times, it is impossible not to laugh at the caricature. Mr. Rosell is a breezy, bright and taking comedian, and he brought all the possibilities out of the part of the young man who puts himself up as a prize in a lottery. The absurdities of the piece, whose plot is almost that of a comic opera, were well brought out by the supporting company. The principal members of whom are Lucia Moore, who played the "chummy" mother with excellent sweetness and taste; Miss Sadie Harris, who made an altogether charming heroine, and Miss Florence Robertson, who pictures the worldly mother of the play with faithfulness. The piece was excellently staged and goved, and while there were no great outbursts of enthusiasm, the audience kept up a constant ripple of merriment throughout the evening.

"The Lottery Man" will be seen at the new Ogden theater tonight.

THE ORPHEUM

The sale of tickets for the first week of vaudeville at the Orpheum begins tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. From the great amount of interest caused by the reopening of the popular playhouse and the promise of an excellent line of attractions, it is expected that there will be a grand rush for tickets for the opening.

The management announces that for the convenience of the patrons of the house, season reservations can be made, thus giving them the same seats selected each week during the entire season.

A bill par excellence will hold the boards for the first week with many more to follow during the season.

AT THE SOURCE OF THE OGDEN RIVER

Party of Ogdenites at the Top of Mount Christo, Where a Beautiful View of Northern Utah is Obtained—Height of the Mountain is Disappointing.

Ogden river is so well known and its canyon so frequent a sight to Ogden people that the source of its waters has been taken as a matter of course, and few have ever even questioned the rise of its chief tributaries. The depth of the canyon and unfailing supply of its water, however, bespeak to thinking people a perpetual source of aquatic riches. It was to determine the source of this stream and explore the mountain which feed the streams which give rise to them that led a recent camping party to push further up the channel of the stream than campers usually ascend.

Ogden river has its principal supply from the South fork; this has as its chief tributary Beaver river, a stream which rises in the springs upon the west slopes of Monte Christo mountain. One of these springs is of great volume and gushes out from beneath a limestone ledge a stream of about the flow of an irrigation canal. After Maggie the next tributary is Cozue creek. It empties into South fork at a point about 24 miles above Ogden. Its main source is a very large spring, in fact, one could say an entire river gushes from one great spring. This spring is just at an altitude of 6,000 feet above sea level and is clear and cold. The waters rush down the mountain side with a series of beautiful waterfalls, which rival the Upper falls in Provo canyon. At a point about 24 miles above Ogden the river is a narrow, rushing torrent. It cuts its way through solid rock, and to pass these narrow one must climb over "skin tie" trail, which leads along a narrow rocky crevice for four miles. Then the river turns north, and with three other tributaries of Ogden river, together with Blacksmith Fork, Paradise, Twelve-Mile and Woodruff creeks, head in up around Mount Christo. This mountain is very well known as a landmark to all who have traveled in that north-east country. Five roads cross different parts of it, and some of them—such as the Danish dugway, for instance—are very much traveled. The mountain is a unique one for Utah, owing to the fact that most of its summit is covered with a vast forest of quaking asp and pine trees, the former growing to a goodly size, some being over a foot in diameter, and most of them at least six inches. These trees arch the roadway for six miles before one reaches the crest, and thus the climber is prone to believe he is going farther than he really does. The summit, in fact, is only about 8,350 feet high, gives a view that must be seen to be appreciated. Miles of green forest stretch away to the south, completely hiding the mountain ridges and valleys alike. Away to the southeast the Uintah range can be clearly seen for its entire length, from Green River to Park City. The Twin peaks and other mountains southeast of Salt Lake are outlined clearly. Bear River valley extends along before you, and beyond it Fremont peak in Wyoming is most prominent. Bear Lake valley and lake lie just north of you, while across the table lands of La Platte and Shoshone settlements you look down through the canyon of Blacksmith fork and Paradise creek into Cache valley, and farther south can see through North Ogden and Orderville canyons across the lake to Pilot Knob, which stands 116 miles west and 2 miles south of Ogden. It is because Monte Christo mountain is so large in area, so well timbered, so fruitful a source of rivers and streams and so often spoken of in miles, that it has been a landmark to farmers and travelers that its altitude has been a dispute for a long time. If one loves grand scenery, good hunting and fishing, or ideal roads and camping ground, under South fork and the base or upper timber of Monte Christo cannot be surpassed.

PROMINENT PEOPLE IN CANYON

held a meeting Monday and organized, after which the following finance committee was appointed to secure the necessary funds for the exhibit: William M. Rash, Salt Lake City; William M. Roylance, Provo; James G. Duffin, Provo; Lewis P. Lund, Sr., Pleasant Grove; Stephen L. Chipman, American Fork; John Y. Smith, Lehi; J. G. M. Barnes, Kayville; Hyrum Stewart, Clearfield; James Eldredge, Woods Cross; E. W. Dunn, Brigham City; John C. Knudson, Brigham City; Willard Hansen, Fielding; E. W. Robinson, Logan; Newell Kinball, Lehi; Harold La Pointe, Lehi; Sven O. Nielson, Fairview; Louis P. Anderson, Mantt; James M. Peterson, Richfield; C. R. McMillen, Tooele; Albert Scowcroft, Ogden; A. R. Heywood, Ogden; Judge H. H. Rolapp, Ogden; L. W. Shurtliff, Ogden; J. A. Hyde, Nephi; Isaac H. Grace, Nephi; John G. Jorgensen, Richfield.

Mr. Brererton states that the annual convention of the state bankers will be held in Provo next year and the only thought the bankers of that little city have in mind just now is to make the convention there as successful and enjoyable as the meeting here this year. He says that Ogden will never be forgotten by the bankers for the cordial entertainment given them at the time of their convention.

The bankers said some of the good people of Ogden are entertaining today at the Rainbow Trout farm in Ogden canyon, the governor of the state, the congressional members from Utah and state officers at a huge trout dinner. Mr. Brererton is a staunch Republican, but he stated emphatically that the gathering has no political significance.

WILL RAISE MONEY FOR UTAH EXHIBIT AT PUEBLO
The advisory committee appointed by Governor William Spry to arrange for an exhibit from this state at the National Irrigation congress, which will meet in Pueblo, Colo., next month, John Bell and George Hearn were arranged in the court this morning for vagrancy. The former pleaded "not guilty," the latter stating frankly that he was a vag.

The testimony given against Bell was that on the night of August 17, 1910, he was in the court house to gather up a number of eggs from the rear of a grocery store on lower Twenty-fifth street and start to make away with them. He would give no satisfactory account of himself, and was without means of support. He was accompanied in the egg raid by Hearn.

Bell stated that he picked up the eggs, thinking that they might be good. He knew it was the habit of grocery stores to "sometimes throw away their bad eggs," and that "they sometimes made a mistake and threw out some of the good ones." He was trying his hand at getting hold of a few good eggs for lunch. He said he and his partner intended taking the eggs to a friend's place where the investigation as to the value of the "pick-up" was to be made.

"I think this man is better off in jail," said the judge, "so I will sentence him to serve ten days with the man who pleaded guilty. It may be that in the course of ten days the men will take a new view of things and get to work."

COMPTON ASKS FOR JURY TRIAL

W. F. Compton appeared in the municipal court this morning for arraignment, pleading not guilty to the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The trial of the case was set for tomorrow morning.

Mr. Compton was represented by an attorney who explained that the young man had not been trifling with the court in not appearing yesterday and the day before when his name was called, but that there had been a "kid misunderstanding" as to the time fixed for the arraignment. He is now having his vacation from his regular occupation in one of the business houses of the city, the lawyer said, and expected to leave the city today for a short trip away from home, but hearing that a bench warrant had been issued for him he had voluntarily made his appearance.

The attorney for the defendant asked that a jury be called to hear the case, and it was so ordered.

The bench was charged with issuing a bench warrant on one of the benches of the city that was dishonored when it was presented for payment, Joseph Baumeister being the one to whom the check was given, he paying cash for it. Mr. Baumeister is the complainant in the action.

TERRY KELLER IS TO FIGHT AGAIN

Terry Keller, the local pugilist with the fractured maxillary, has left his breakfast food diet and is again eating masculine provender.

"My jaw is coming along fine," said the "kid boxer" this morning, "and I am about anything but restaurant leafsteak. I'm going to have the wires taken off my teeth this afternoon, and will probably be in condition so that I can leave for the coast the first of next week. I'm getting lonesome for San Francisco, and want to get back. Ogden is a Jonah for me—the accident to my jaw wouldn't have happened any other place."

Terry says that, despite the annoyance of a broken jaw, he has enjoyed being back among his old friends and relatives in this city, but that he wants to get back to Frisco, where Charley Cleever, his manager, is living. He vows that he will soon be able to fight again, and retorts his intention of having another go with Thomas, the slugger who broke his jawbone at the Fair Grounds about three weeks ago.

EGG STORY TOLD IN COURT

John Bell and George Hearn were arraigned in the court this morning for vagrancy. The former pleaded "not guilty," the latter stating frankly that he was a vag.

The testimony given against Bell was that on the night of August 17, 1910, he was in the court house to gather up a number of eggs from the rear of a grocery store on lower Twenty-fifth street and start to make away with them. He would give no satisfactory account of himself, and
